The Handy Canopy is a provisional oasis built for Four Corners, with community input and local tree limbs. We conducted workshops at Speak for the Trees, the Codman Square Library, and the Codman Square Farmers market to trace people's hands onto metal that became shimmering foliage.

The sculpture represents the green spaces that might exist in the community. It is a reminder of the increasing need for trees in an ever changing climate. All are welcome to relax and reflect under the shade of these helpful hands.
